Kashmir: A Way Forward

Coordinated by Dr. Sadaf Munshi

Featuring the documentary film screening of Apour Ti Yapor

April 5th and 6th

Kashmir conflict has been one of the many intractable conflicts of the modern world. Largely seen as a territorial dispute between the rival countries India and Pakistan and an outcome of the “unfinished business of Partition” (in 1947, when India and Pakistan got independence from the British rule), there are many different dimensions of this long-lasting conflict which make it very complex and complicated vis-à-vis any prospects of enduring peace. The symposium will focus on the social, psychological and human aspects of the Kashmir conflict. It will provide a platform for different voices specializing on various aspects of the Kashmir conflict to discuss and inform the students and faculty at UNT and the DFW community about the social, historical and political aspects of the Kashmir problem. The participants will discuss and share their views on the various themes and offer fresh perspectives on the peace process.
